FOCUS ON: CO-CREATION; UNITED WE STAND

All our partners have one thing in common: it is in their DNA to believe in their capacity to help vulnerable people. Far from acting alone on a daily basis, they are willing to be involved in a social ecosystem built upon collective thinking and action. For them, what they do and what social benefits result from that is more important than money or their image. What that means is that, on any given project, they can call upon the expertise of partners to make the most of their complementary skills to develop appropriate solutions together so as to help more people.

These joint projects underline both the sector's capacity to get things moving and its versatility. They bring greater efficiency by combining effort and resources. The sharing of expertise and vision gives rise to innovative, comprehensive approaches in responding to each challenge.

Such close partnership is not restricted to the social solidarity economy. According to a study by ASHOKA¹, 'traditional' companies are just as interested in collaborating on projects with socially-oriented organisations as they are in developing new ways either to strengthen the genuine impact of their corporate social responsibility (CSR) policy or their employees' commitment to such issues. Indeed, 83% think that a positive social impact can go hand-in-hand with financial profit. Given such signs, one can foresee great collaborations in the future.

ABOUT OUR PARTNERS:

SOLIFAP & SNL-PROLOGUES

One of SOLIFAP's missions is to support associations in building "highly social" housing for vulnerable people. High property prices and falling public sector investment make it difficult to build in problematic areas. SOLIFAP and SNL have over the last three years together built 17 housing projects in Paris and the Ile-de-France, which could not have been achieved without working in partnership.

SIEL BLEU & FRENCH RED CROSS

A project called "All in good shape" has been launched in the disabled persons' structures of the French Red Cross (Croix-Rouge Française). Thanks to the support of the FDJ Fondation, Siel Bleu has been able to offer two hours of activities a week to individuals: outdoor exercises, walking, soft gymnastics, relaxation, land yachting, etc. The main goal of Siel Bleu & the French Red Cross is to improve public health, contribute to well-being and cultivate social contact.

FONCIERE HABITAT ET HUMANISME & GROUPE LA VARAPPE

Foncière Habitat & Humanisme and the inclusion group La Varappe Développement have partnered to launch the Passerelles ("Walkway") project which builds low-cost housing using reconditioned shipping containers. La Varappe Développement had already completed an initial temporary reconditioning of containers for the international architecture biennial "Solar Decathlon" and as an eco-citizen initiative offered to sell them to Foncière Habitat & Humanisme. The company has carried out works in Lyon to develop nine lodgings - three 2-beroomed and six 1-bedroomed flats - for people on low incomes.

ALIMA ASKS:

HOW CAN WE RE-THINK HUMANITARIAN AID AND REVOLUTIONARISE HOW WE INTERVENE ON THE MEDICAL FRONT?

These are the questions that have been at the forefront of the minds of the founders of ALIMA (The Alliance for International Medical Action) since they decided to set up a new kind of NGO² in 2009 based on one essential premise: patients must be placed at the heart of every consideration and action.

They believe that rethinking operational methods so as to intervene in a different, sustainable way requires concerted action to combine talent, expertise, local and international knowledge and integrated research within their operations.

Based on this disruptive approach, ALIMA foresees the emergence of a new generation of NGOs, capable of creating – for the first time – connections between medical care and research, local and international players, and being as close as possible to the people they serve: the NGA - Non-Governmental Alliance.

The alliance is particularly strong in research. Indeed, emerging infectious diseases are a major threat to public health worldwide, as the Ebola virus epidemic illustrated. From this necessity to link research and practical medicine arose the first humanitarian medical and operational research platform involving a North/South partnership – CORAL (Clinical and Operational Research Alliance) – the result of the partnership between ALIMA and PACCI/Inserm.

Today, there are more than 10 joint research projects under way, including the prevention of malaria and undernutrition, fighting against malnourishment, and technical innovations to deal with haemorrhagic fevers that pose a strong threat of becoming epidemic.

Intuition evolved into certainty, strengthened by positive results (more than a million patients a year are treated by ALIMA's teams): only an integrated approach can provide sustainable solutions to save thousands of lives.
